for his continued success.

Mr. Johnson, the new landlord of the Pender, is a son of Mr. H. B. Johnson, of Johnston, and is a popular young gentleman, and will no doubt continue to make the Pender a popular place for the traveling public.

—The Bower City Rifles, company B first regiment, W. N. G., held their monthly meeting last evening. The resignation of Second Lieutenant L. H. Leif was reported as accepted, and Orderly Sergeant N. Zofy LaGrange recommended to fill the vacancy. Second Sergeant Fred Koebin was promoted to orderly sergeant and right guide and Third Sergeant Perry Frick to second sergeant and left guide. Private Henry Casford was appointed commissary sergeant to fill vacancy.

—Miss May Ward charmed a large audience at the Rockaway rink last night by the ease and grace of her skating. Her exhibition was an admirable one and she displayed extraordinary accomplishments as a skater. She was neatly attired in a blue costume trimmed with ermine and presented a fine appearance. She is without doubt the most skillful lady skater that has yet been seen in the west, and so well did she please the audience at the rink last night that she was loudly recalled to repeat her performance to satisfy them.—Leavenworth Times, March 3, 1885.

—Everybody who likes a tender, juicy, piece of roast or steak, should buy their meat at Kueck's corn exchange market. Mr. Kueck supplies most of the west side hotels and has received from them as well as from private families, who praise the secret of his success is in the fact that he never buys for quantity alone, the animals killed at his slaughter house must all be of good quality, and so having no inferior meat to dispose of he can sell the best, at reasonable prices. Stop in and look at his choice assortment of meats when you are getting ready for Sunday.

—Mr. Rowland R. Cook, residing on Ravine street, first ward, died this forenoon, at eleven o'clock, aged forty-five years. The deceased was attacked last Monday with pneumonia, which terminated fatally as above. He leaves a wife, one daughter and two sons to mourn his death. Deceased was a veteran of the late war, having served two years in G company, 5th Wisconsin volunteer, and two years in the First Wisconsin Heavy Artillery. Although not a member of the Grand Army his funeral will be in charge of the Sergeant post, and will be held on Sunday afternoon the hour to be fixed by the Sergeant post at their meeting this evening.

—An old sailor, who was in the hallway over the post office building, this morning, when the Sale & Pierce safe was being drawn up, finally became disgusted with the way the men pulled and laid hold of the rope himself, to show how it should be done. He got a good hold and began to sing and pull in regular sailor fashion, but just as he got to "Yo heave" he was struck a wet place on the floor and he went against Judge Erickson's doorway so hard that the windows in King's bookstore rattled. He kept right on singing though, but his song after that wasn't of the sentiment which would grace the columns of a newspaper.

—Miss Ward, who appears at the rink Saturday evening, May 9th, opened a new rink at Marquette April 25th. The manager writes her as follows: "We opened our rink the 25th, with Miss Mary Ward as the attraction, and a more refined, pleasing exhibition has never been seen in our city. Your correspondence has been all the best skaters in the country, and in his estimation, none of them can compare with Miss Ward for grace and beauty. Our people were delighted with her and hope soon to have the pleasure of seeing her again. This communication is entirely volitional and it is a pleasure to testify to the merits of lady like Miss Ward."

Yours very respectfully,

(Signed) R. D. STEVENS,

Manager Casino Rink, Marquette, Michigan.

The Weather.

At seven o'clock this morning the thermometer indicated 38 degrees above zero. Partly cloudy with south wind. At 1 o'clock p. m. the register was 43 degrees above zero. Light rain, with west wind. For the corresponding hours one year ago the register was 64 and 72 degrees above zero.

A Handsome Compliment.

The Wisconsin Journal of Education gives Dr. J. B. Whiting, Dr. J. W. St. John and Mr. Cyrus Miner the following complimentary: "At the last session of the legislature, Janesville's city charter was amended, increasing the board of education from five to seven members. The two additional ones are elected at large. This arrangement insures at least two representative men in the educational council of the city. The new members are Dr. J. W. St. John, Dr. J. B. Whiting and Cyrus Miner, Esq., gentlemen of high standing in professional and business circles, and progressive in their ideas of public school work. These first two gentlemen bring ripe experience to their office. Under these circumstances we are safe in predicting a prosperous year for the Janesville schools. The winter term of the schools closed April 24. There are ten members in the class which expects to graduate in June, three boys and seven girls."

Puzzles.

The old 13-14-15 puzzle that attracted so much attention a few years ago, will be remembered as one of the most fascinating puzzles that was ever placed before the public. The Gazette, tomorrow evening, will contain another specimen, known as the 7 and 8 puzzle, which is a puzzle of merit and which is furnished by P. S. Winslow, of 15 and 13 River street.

A list of prizes, amounting to $200 for this puzzle and the same will be distributed by a committee of three at 15 and 13 River street Monday evening, June 1st, at 7:30 o'clock. Look out for the puzzle in the Gazette to-morrow evening.

THE MOBILE DRILL.

The Janesville Guards in Excellent Health and Enjoying the Tournament.

Our Boys Do Not Expect to Win a Prize.

(Popular Correspondence of the Gazette.)

Mobile, Ala., May 5th, 1885.

The infantry drill for companies who never won at an inter-state contest, began this forenoon at nine o'clock. Yesterday afternoon the captains of the companies who had entered this drill drew for positions in the contest the first position falling to Captain Doe; and accordingly, at nine o'clock, the Guards in full dress uniform, were marched upon the drill ground and the contest began. The general verdict of the Janesville delegation was that the Guards never drilled better or made a finer appearance than they did this morning, very few errors being made, the most noticeable one occurring in marching three fours from right to rear, when two of the fours became slightly mixed up. A few minor errors were noticed in executing the manual, but on the whole the boys did splendidly, and made fewer errors than any of the companies who followed them, and who have a wide reputation for precise drilling.

Following the Guards, and in the order numbered, the Richard Rifles, Montgomery True Blues, London Rifles (Mobile), Savannah Oxides, Muscu tin (Louis) Rifles, Solina Light Guards and Esconobin Rifles, appeared upon the grounds and took part in the contest. Of these by far the best company seems to be the Savannah Oxides, whose manual and marching was marked by great precision and steadiness. With the exception of a few slight errors in platoon movements in double time their drilling was almost perfect. The company marching next to them was perhaps the London Rifles, who made a remarkably fine appearance and drilled with great precision and steadiness.

The boys seem to be comfortably situated in camp and are all in good health, notwithstanding the change in climate and water. The weather is very warm in the day time and were it not for the cool, refreshing breeze from the bay, would be quite oppressive. The nights, however, are cool and heavy blankets are necessary for comfort. In drill this afternoon, a member of the Solina Light Guards received a sun stroke and was moved on a stretcher. To-morrow the prize zouave and artillery drill will take place and should the weather prove favorable, will probably be witnessed by a large crowd of spectators.

A private letter from Adjutant Newman, dated May 5th, says: "I have just a moment, am just busy in camp as ever; had brigade dress parade this afternoon, at which I had the honor to serve as assistant adjutant general, mounted. The second class drill is not yet complete. The Guards drew first place in the drill. The boys showed sadly the lack of drill together as a team. I think we shall take about fifth place in that class. We shall withdraw from the first class on account of this fact: If we enter in that class we cannot drill the company at all; that is, we cannot instruct them, and will not get much benefit from the trip. Now we propose to put in what time we can and prepare for New Orleans. In this way we can make a better showing at that drill, and it will be better for the company."

PAVEMENTS.

Wood vs. Stone—Some Pointers Relative to the Different Styles of Pavement Now in Use.

Now that the question of repaving Milwaukee street is interesting the people, this extract from an English journal is worth reading:

Just at this time when Chicago is abandoning wood for street paving and adopting stone, the great European cities that have been long experimenting with different pavements, are abandoning wood and taking to stone. The difficulty in Chicago seems to be that no pavement has ever been properly laid there, and the probability is the stone pavement now in favor will turn out as much of a failure as the old wood did. In London, Paris and some other large cities abroad, stone, macadam and asphalt have each been condemned and the preference given to wood. Paris, less than two years ago, was largely paved with macadam and asphalt, but today the principal thoroughfares are paved with wood, even down to the Champs Elysees, where it would seem the former macadam should have answered the purpose. Miles of wood are also laid in London. The result in both these cities appears to be generally satisfactory. The wood pavement is easily and quickly repaired; it is not so damaging to vehicles; it offers less resistance to the stone and, above all, it is greatly reduced, the distracting rattle. Oxford street and Holborn are like a drawing room in comparison to lower Broadway. The method of laying the wood abroad differs considerably from that of the generally employed in Chicago. A thick and durable concrete foundation is first constructed, upon which a bed of cement is laid. Then the wooden blocks are placed with the usual gravel between the rows, and over the whole is poured a thin mixture of cement which permeates and fills every interstice. The Chicago method was to level the street, fill in with sand, and at the laying a layer or two of chip and gravel, put the blocks on, and over the whole is poured a thin mixture of cement which permeates and fills every interstice. The Chicago method was to level the street, fill in with sand, and at the laying a layer or two of chip and gravel, put the blocks on, and over the whole is poured a thin mixture of cement which permeates and fills every interstice. The Chicago method was to level the street, fill in with sand, and at the laying a layer or two of chip and gravel, put the blocks on, and over the whole is poured a thin mixture of cement which permeates and fills every interstice.

There is the same difficulty with the pavement in Janesville that there has been in Chicago; it was not laid in a proper manner. The original Nicholson patent specified that after the street had been graded a covering of coarse cement should be laid, on this a layer of wooden blocks, alternately four and eight inches long were to be placed with gravel rammed in up to a level with the top of the blocks. This formed a solid foundation for the top layer which was to be composed of eight inch blocks, with strips of inch board between the rows.

In the latest systems of macadamizing the street is first drained and graded; then a layer of limestone, broken to about the size of a man's fist, is laid, with a gutter on each side of cobble stone. After the large limestone has settled it is rolled down and a covering of stone broken to pass through an inch and a half ring is spread on and rolled down.

The action of wheels on this angular stone soon joins the blocks into a solid, smooth roadway and as it is perfectly impervious to water, all liability of its being thrown up by the action of the frost is done away with. As to the durability, in the tests made so far there has been very little difference between the best qualities of the two systems, the usual time without repairs being about six years.

From all the showings, however, it would seem that the most durable method, is the Belgian pavement, in use to some extent in New York. This consists of square blocks of hard stone laid close together in a bed of sand. It wears very slowly, will not sink if laid well, and is not expensive, as when there is a supply of good stone near at hand it can be put in for about $2 per square yard. Its only drawback is the one fault which it shares with most other block pavements—the tendency to be thrown up by the frost. This is a serious drawback to most styles of block road-beds; but is now overcome by the use of a layer of pitch, spread over the surface. If it is put on thick enough to repel water, the frost has no effect upon the paving block.

THE TRUTH COMES OUT.

IN THE MATTER OF THE DEATH OF SALLIE REBER,

Provided It Can Be Fished Up Out of the Following Contradictory Testimony—The Brother-in-Law's Story—Fishes Contradictions.

New York, May 8.—At Ludlow street jail Thursday Mr. Fish had given orders that he would see to reporters. He declined, however, to write the following: "The statement regarding Mrs. Laing is mostly incorrect as to facts and dates. Mr. Layman, of the Sandusky (Ohio) Evening Journal, is well informed as to all the facts in the case. Beyond this Mr. Fish refused to talk. Mr. Layman is married to a sister of the deceased woman.

The Truth of the Matter.

SANDUSKY, Ohio, May 8.—The following is the statement of Mr. F. A. Layman, editor of the Evening Journal, and brother-in-law of Mrs. Laing, whose name figures in the sensational accounts of that lady's death:

"Regarding the cause and manner of Mrs. Laing's death, I am prepared to denounce the published statements as false in great part, if not in whole. The account is strictly true until it touches upon her life subsequent to the death of her first husband, Mr. Laing. At that point the inaccuracies begin. Some months after that event, Mr. James D. Fish, at that time known as a millionaire banker, began paying her his addresses, which culminated in May, 1884, about the time he became involved in his financial difficulties, in a private marriage, which, in order to escape the notoriety that would ensue, she stipulated should be kept secret until such time as he was free again. These troubles, which at first appeared temporary, became more harassing as time went on, and she finally insisted upon her former stipulation, and on the 11th hour of her death, which was as sudden and unexpected to her friends as it was to herself. The issue of this marriage with Mr. Fish was a daughter, born Feb. 24, at Carlstadt, N. J., and while she was in the room of Mr. Fish, under his care and direction. The mother had almost recovered from the effects of childbirth when she was attacked with an old stomach trouble that was chronic, and she died on the 11th of March, but for the reasons stated already, which were satisfactory alike to her and him, she was never made public and had not been since her death, because of the attendant circumstances, and of her express request to that effect."

"In justice to Mr. Fish I would add that he has been anxious from the first to make known the marriage and absolved by the family from secrecy, will do so to-day."

Another New York Story.

New York, May 8.—Mrs. Holland, a friend of Mrs. Laing, who was with her while she was at Carlstadt, said Thursday night: "One day last November, while in her room at the Hotel Vendome, she confided to me her troubles. My husband was away from this city, and she had insisted that I should stay until his return. We were sitting together. She was very sad. Tears were on her cheeks. She picked up a piece of paper and wrote for some time. She handed the paper to me and asked me to deliver it to her while I read it. She wrote that she knew that I would not love her any more after I knew how wicked she had been. She had thought to marry a man—she did not tell me his name—but afterwards she had determined not to. Before she had made her determination she had been foolish and wicked. She hoped that I would forgive her. She was in trouble, and would die if she could not confide in some one. She begged me not to ask who the cause of her trouble was. When I had finished reading she came into the room again and buried her face in my lap. She was very sensitive, and was anxious to hide her condition. Late in November she moved to the Albert. I saw her there very often. We talked each other as sisters, and to save her feelings I never questioned her as to who was the cause of her trouble. I had no idea that it was Mr. Fish. I looked upon him as a friend of the family. I knew that Sallie thought much of him, and that he loved her dearly. I visited her at Carlstadt the morning after the birth of her child, and again on Monday, March 9, the day before she died. I was shocked at the change in her appearance, and said that I was surprised at not being told of her condition. I told her that I had better send for her sister. She begged me not to. Just then there came a knock at the door. Sallie started and turned pale. 'Oh, if that should be Hattie,' she said, 'if she should find me here!'"

"She said that she was in New York, and Sallie feared that any one might know about her child. I feared that the shock of seeing her sister might kill her, so I did not see her for some time."

"Mr. Fish then declined to answer the marriage, but declared emphatically that he had never been married to Sallie Reber Laing. He said to a reporter in Ludlow street jail: 'I first met Sallie Reber at dinner at the house of a friend. It was before her marriage to Mr. Laing. The acquaintance then made ripened into friendship. She visited me in the Arctic flats, and we would often go from there to a hotel or restaurant and have dinner.'"

"Were you married to Mrs. Laing, or were you under any contract to marry her?"

"No, sir; most decidedly not."

"Do you know where the child is?"

"I could give a pretty good guess as to its whereabouts."
